Builder Predicts Impending Return From Suburbia

CHICAGO—"It is just a glimmering today, but the pattern is already set for many cities throughout the country. People are becoming dissatisfied with life in the suburbs; they are going to move back to the city, and then straight up!"

So predicts Chicago realtor Ralph W. Applegate, a specialist in the construction of high-rise residential cooperative apartment buildings. He is convinced that for Chicago and scores of other cities, the time is ripe for a major reversal of the trend to a suburbia.

As an example, he cites Phoenix, Ariz., where the Phoenix Towers, a $3 million 14-story luxury cooperative is now nearing completion near the downtown area. Demand for apartments in the building—the first of its kind in the state—was so great, he says, that more than half were sold from blueprints alone.

According to Applegate, cities can expand just so far. After that, they invariably bog down, deep in their own mire of public and private transportation. Fifty years ago, city planners, if they were any for most young towns, had no conception of the potentially strangling volume of traffic which would result as the community expanded outward in every direction.

"Most cities of any size have reached the point of horizontal saturation," Applegate says. "There simply isn't anywhere to go but straight up! And, if we go up, there's no point in doing it 45 or 60 minutes away from business and social centers of community life. We must build near downtown . . . As communities grow and expand, it becomes more difficult to surmount the problem of finding space for new homes close to centers of business and social activity.

New Missing Link Is Uncovered

Washington, D. C.—Finding of a "missing link" in the evolution of modern mammals—a creature that had branched off from the great family of odd-toed ungulates, which includes the horse and rhino, toward the present tapir—is reported by C. Lewis Gazin, Smithsonian Institution curator of vertebrate paleontology.

This ancient animal, of which a fossil jaw and parts of a skull were found in the Wind River basin of Wyoming, was Dilophodon, about the size of a fox, which lived during the upper Eocene period of geological time, about 45,000,000 years ago. The Wind River area long has been a favorite hunting ground for mammals of the Eocene, the period when the warm-blooded creatures began to take on some of their present forms.

Also encountered were the fossil remains of a somewhat larger tapiroid, Desmatotherium, rather resembling the smaller tapir. Dilophodon, but cannot be considered directly ancestral to any living form although representative of the general complex from which arose rhinos, horses, tapirs, and certain groups of extinct hoofed mammals.

Men at 21 Top Auto Fatality Lists

NEW YORK—Men at age 21 record the highest mortality from motor vehicle accidents, according to experience of one insurance company among its millions of industrial policyholders. At this age, the toll among men is nearly eight times that among women.

The motor vehicle accident death rate among the insured male during the years 1953-55 rose sharply from an average of less than 10 per 10,000 at ages 1-24 to a peak of 64.1 per 100,000 at age 21. The rate for females at age 21 was 8.4 per 100,000.

Among females, there was a comparitively gradual rise in the death rate from this cause during the teen ages, with a rate of 13.4 per 100,000 at age 18, but the peak rate, 16.0 per 100,000, occurred at ages 65-74 years.

The higher motor vehicle death rate among males in the late teens and early twenties may reflect, in large measure, frequent disregard of safe driving practices the statisticians suggest.

Picture for Candles Brighter Than Ever

WASHINGTON—The simple candle, man's main source of light for 20 centuries, brightens many a special corner in the dazzling age of electricity.

Although gas lamps and incandescent bulbs ended dependence on wax and tallow dips, tens of millions of candles are set aflame each year—in the dusky still of churches; over the silver, crystal and gleaming damask of festive tables; on countless birthday cakes.

DOGS BREAK UP COUPLE

London, England.- John Lintern blamed oodles of poodles as the cause of the breakup of his marriage. Lintern told the judge that his wife, Nancy, had 50 poodles, gave them the run of the house and told him to get out when he protested that the house "smelled like a kennel." He got his divorce.

CIVIL DEFENSE 'KEYPOINT' for Los Angeles is one of 200 such communication centers throughout the nation to be manned by local civil defense. In less populous areas, they often police or fire stations, where sonnel is on duty. They depend on the Federal Civil Defense Administration's 15-mile warning net (inset) to link them to Air Force and Navy control centers. Keypoints notify, in turn some 1,500 local centers which set off sirens and call out civil defense personnel.

Speechmakers

Airplane pioneers Wilbur and Orville Wright, a taciturn duo, hated to make speeches.

Once, ata a luncheon, they were scheduled to speak before a group of inventors. The toastmaster called on Wilbur.

"There must be some mistake," stammered Wilbur. "Orville is the one who does the talking."

The toastmaster turned to Orville. The latter stood up and said: "Wilbur just made the speech."

NEWS FOR VETERANS

Asiatic influenze that, for the first time, recently hit the United States is the subject of a study by Veterans Administration to determine whether ultra-violet light can help prevent its spread.

The pilot project is functioning at the VA hospital in Livermore, Calif., core of the area where the disease first was noted in the United States, VA said.

The Livermore hospital is one of the few in the nation that is equipped with ultra-violet lights.

Dr. Ross McLean, director of profesional services at the VA hospital in Baltimore, Md., is on temporary duty at Livermore as coordinator for the study. The research will be carried out by Dr. Harrison S. Collisi, manager of the Livermore hospital, and his staff.

Dr. McLean said the primary aim of the project is to learn the value of irradiating indoor areas with ultra-violet light as a protection against influenza.

"We are particularly interested in determining if the Asiatic influenza virus is airborne and, if so, the effect of ultra-violet irridiation on airborne virus," he said.

Appomattox is a growing town.

All of these analyses are not available in every area. Please see your local Southern States Cooperative Service Agency for the high analysis fertilizers in your locality.

Southern States leads the way with high analysis fertilizer. High analysis cuts your costs by giving you the same number of units of plant food in fewer bags. For example, one bag of 10-20-20 will do the same job as two bags of 5-10-10 and cost you considerably less. Much less handling and hauling . . . fewer tons to spread.

Here's How You SAVE . . .
3 tons 2-12-12 . . . $130.05*
2 tons 3-18-18 . . . $115.00*
Same Plant Food
*YOU SAVE . . . . . $15.05 And You Spread 2 Tons Instead of 3

 Prices May Vary Slightly In Some Areas.*

No wonder farmers regard high analysis fertilizer as the greatest advancement in the fertilizer industry in years. So will you. Order your needs today!
